INTERESTING NEWS

FROM SOLDIER BOYS

FROM NEIL COFFEY

Bethlehem, France, November 25th, 1918

Dear Father: Yesterday was the day that every A. E. F. boy was to write to his Dad, but I had to work all day so I will write today. Now that war is over they let us tell where we are but that is about all there is to tell about the place, as it is a little deserted village near Verdun. The place is all in ruins. There are three houses standing out of three hundred. We are living in an old stone building with shell holes in it big enough to throw a cow through. When we first came here it was close to the lines, but not for long as the we were moving fast. The only thing we have seen was from aeroplanes. They were after the machine shops of our company but didn't get them. One day three men got orders to dig the trenches. They had to dig the trenches. But that night an aeroplane dropped a bomb about ten feet from where the hole was to be and made a better hole than the men could have done in a day's time.

We got news the evening before that the digging would stop the next day at eleven, but didn't believe it, as there are so many rumors going around all the time but just the same when it came time every man was lined up to see the order. One of the heavy repair companies will go and there are eight of them, so there is one chance out of eight of us going.

They can't take me out of this country too quick. France is a country too quick. I like it but I can't say I like it. It may be different in peace times, and if I ever see it again I hope it will be under different conditions. I have been in and seen some very pretty places and again some of the places haven't been so pretty. Where we are now all there is to be seen is barbed wire entanglements and trenches and not a civilian for miles.

The country is not as far advanced as I expected to find it. In southern France they use axes for everything but here there are more horses used. About the only thing France has anything on the United States is on roads and they certainly have them and the very best. I was ever one to ride and I have been riding since I started with trucks carrying five tons and heavy artillery trains a mile long traveling over them, and they are in good condition now, better than some of our stone roads at home.

The auto trucks and tractors have played an important part in this war and their drivers are due big credit as they put in long days in the worst of weather, hating mud and rain and without any lights and nothing to guide them but their memory. I witnessed an air battle between two Hun and a lone American. It was the greatest thing I ever saw. Around and around they went, diving up and down each trying to get the advantage of the other. It lasted for it seemed like hours, but it was only a few minutes and then the American got one of the Huns and then it was only a few seconds until he brought down the other.

We have lost only two men from our company over here and one deserted from the train going to New York. We have had very little sickness. A little Spanish flu some time ago. I was laid up for nearly five weeks with rheumatism but feel good now. Went back to work last week. We have a good place to work in now, a kitchen with a wooden floor and a good place to sleep in. The three cooks on my shift and myself have a little more room to ourselves. We went through the empty house in the village and found a nice little heating stove, a spring bed and a large mirror. The next day we are off we will look up a carpet and some chairs and then we will live the life of Riley until we move then will fix up another place. We have done the same thing a dozen times and expect we will do it a dozen times more before we get out of this country. We also have electric light as we found an electric line some distance away, so we didn't ask any questions but just tapped it.

We have quite a collection of live stock now, three pups and their mother, one fox terrier, one Angora cat, a few common cats, one dog and a few smaller birds. We move we make we add something to our collection.

I met Joe Richards, Phil Brown, John Kologoski, Hubert Starks, F. P. Blackburn, A. Christensen and a Hauback boy from the camp side. They left Grand Rapids last July with Company G but were quarantined in Mills and lost their company. I went through a town where Geo Gibson was but didn't have time to see him.

When we landed in France we stayed in Napoleon's old prison, barracks at Brest for a week, that is an old place with high stone walls around it with broken bottles embedded in the top of it so a person couldn't climb over it. We were in the place where he used to line up prisoners to shoot as the wall was full of bullet marks still.

Will close for this time as I have four frozen quarters of beef to cut up and steaks for 300 men to get on. Hoping this finds everybody well.

Dear Dad: Well as the A. E. F. has a day set aside for "Dad's Day" the same as "Mother's Day," Nov. 24th is the day, so I will get a few days start and write now.

Well now that the Kaiser has done his fading away and the circus is over, I am wondering when will we go home. But I guess it won't be long now.

A BIG DAY AT THE FIRST MORAVIAN CHURCH SUNDAY

The First Moravian church celebrated its 50th anniversary next Sunday. Also the 16th anniversary of the pastor's ministry. The Rev. K. A. Mueller, D. D., who is conducting special services at the church every evening this week will preach the sermon at the morning service. He will also speak at the English service in the evening. The Rev. Christian Madsen, who organized this congregation will make a German address at this later service. Holy communion will be celebrated at the close of each service and members will be received.

DEATH OF MRS. NORA CASE

Mrs. Nora Case, one of the old residents of the county, died at the home of her son, James Case, in the town of Port Edwards, on Monday, January 13th after a illness of some length. The death of Mrs. Case marks the passing of another one of the early pioneers of this section who came when the country was new and with indomitable will of the pioneer faced the terrors of privation and hardship, and with steadfast fortitude blazed the trail that others might follow in their footsteps and find an easier road on which to travel.

Mrs. Case was born in County Clare, Ireland, on the 15th of January, 1825, and would consequently have been eighty years old had she lived two days longer. She came to America when a young woman, and almost immediately to Wisconsin, and at a time when settlements were far apart, she and her husband, Patrick Case, who preceded her in death, settled in the town of Randolph in this county, and for half a century they were identified with the history of this section, with the exception of a short time spent in California and South Dakota.

Deceased is survived by eight children, they being James Case, a carpenter, of the Wood county poor farm, Mrs. T. Hubert and Mrs. Geo. Uselding of Woolsey, S. D., Mrs. C. Rebel of Watertown, S. D., Mrs. C. Young of Huron, S. D., Mrs. Ray Cooper of Bonilla, S. D., Mrs. Mary of Chicago, and John Case, who resides in California. She is also survived by one sister, Mrs. P. Conway of this city.

The household of the deceased was at all times open to the needy whether friend or stranger. She knew how to sympathize with the poor for she herself had suffered the privations that followed in the wake of the pioneer, she had toiled as only the early settlers had to toil through those years which were full of service to humanity and community illustrating a character of singular sweetness, purity and excellence well deserving the respect and esteem of her every friend and acquaintance whose hearts are today stirred deeply by sweetest memories of this splendid and noble woman. Words cannot do justice to her unselfish purpose and service or to the love which those who knew her well bore for her. Her memory for them will be a cherished one and the example of her qualities and achievements will be a grateful possession for those who were her friends and a blessed legacy to those who had the right to love her best.

The funeral was held this morning at 10 o'clock from St. Peter and Paul church, services being conducted by Rev. Feldman of Nekoma and Rev. Reding of this city.

SERVICES AT KELLNER

There will be preaching service at the First Moravian church of Kellner at 3 o'clock next Sunday afternoon. Bishop Mueller will preach and will meet the church officers immediately after the service.

SALOONKEEPER FINED

Harry Ames, who runs the saloon in the Harvey Gee building, was fined five dollars and costs one day last week for selling liquor in a post-office box.

Rogers Mott has the distinction of having received the appointment as one of the state chairmen in the coming American drive. He has been under his supervision the counties of Wood, Portage, Juneau, Adams, Washburn, Marquette and Green Lake.

Boche and occupying the territory which he has evacuated, Geo. Washburn, a local citizen, has been caused he only crossed the Delaware and I am going to cross the Rhine.

I met thousands of released prisoners, French, Italians, Russian and Americans. They are a pitiful procession of afflicted, broken, starved and weary. The sight of them makes the heart ache. They are mere shadows of men in rags and tatters, stumbling along with sunken eyes, straggled for the first glimpse of American khaki.

Well the weather sure has turned cold in the past two weeks. Well my time is short and will have to close, hoping this finds you all in the best of health.

FROM G. D. BARNEY

Camp Hunt, France, Dec. 1, 1918

Dear Father and all: I have a little time to write today and will try and tell you something of France. What I have seen of it I don't think much of but there is this much about it that it is not what you hear it is as nice and warm as home. The men are all around with his shirt sleeves rolled up and don't think anything of it. It is about like September weather at home. But everything is old and the land in this part of the country is like Adams county. Sandy and nothing but pine trees. But the northern part of France is fine land, mostly clay but the farmers don't seem to know how to farm for I didn't see any nice farms from the train and we came from the northern part of France on the train. Was on the train two days and two nights. I haven't got any mail from you for about two weeks but expect you got back to the states but it looks as if I will be back by spring but I can't tell if it is as nice and warm here all winter as it is now. Well I will have to close as I can't write today. Tell mother that I got her papers and will write her soon.

Love to all,

CLEVE WAS PRESENT

AT THE OBSEQUIES

Big Timber, Mont.

Dear Friend Bill and Al:— Not having time to do and the New Years being on its way, I thought I had better write and let you know that I am still in the land of the living and that our glorious little city is still in the state. And could be sure in an awful state. Cold water applications are all that will save her now. "The Hope of the Future," "Friend of the Poor," "Saviour of the Race" etc., our old friend Prohibition has arrived. He came not with the New Year either on one day or on another. He was at the funeral, but as I had to work until eleven o'clock I was unable to get up to the Mourner's bench, which was occupied by the lifelong friends of the deceased.

It was one of the saddest events I have ever witnessed. No one shed a tear. Of course there were a few drops spilled here and there, but I assure you that it wasn't intentional. The ceremonies were a little different than any I had heretofore participated in. There was no eulogy, but a kindly word for the old boy. No one tried to tell what a model of perfection he had been. But one look at the faces of the congregation told the whole story better than mere words could ever do. It was one of the times when "Actions spoke louder than words, and believe me everyone was right busy. The master of ceremonies, "Fuzzie" the team files had his part done better than the average Grand Old Short and not once during the session did he refer to the book. It was just one "Collection" after another, the the Bell kept ringing continually for the dead. You could hardly say I followed for if I told one half, there would be a lot of funerals, and no one left to mourn but the widows.

On account of not having a building large enough, they held services in the city hall. There were a few places large enough to hold a good sized crowd but of course as I would have it they were not equipped with the necessary paraphernalia.

Unable to stay for the closing Ode as I felt that even a little more sorrow would be too much for me, not being used to it. So when the Brothers started to cast anxious eyes at the clock whose hands were fast approaching the Mystic Hour I cast one more prayer for the deceased and departed. Far down the street came the mournful strains of that familiar hymn "Tonight Will Never Come Again." They were carrying what was left of John Barlowen in a new casket. Somewhere I have read or at sometime I have heard someone who has read it, relate something about the ashes being scattered to the four winds. And so it was in this case. The remains have been carried to the four points of the compass. Once more after the words of Consolation will help many to bear their sorrows. "The loved one is gone, yet he is near us." Not me of course as I put mine down in the cellar and expect to leave it there for good. Once more, looking far off lands that have not yet seen the light, shall come forth. If they ask to eat I will give them bread. If they ask to drink well I have as good as can be had in any land. I hope I have not deceived the brothers who will have no Camels in the caravan.

Taken altogether it was a sad finish to the old year. It seems that the supply of Lutebsk was very short this year perhaps on account of the submarines, perhaps from some other cause.

Lutebsk being the National Holiday dessert of the sons of Norway and this city being very much occupied by those same sons, Xmas was celebrated in a home. At that time I was assisting at one of the Prune houses and had to be a party to many a heart-breaking. One of the saddest scenes of my life, was the sight of twelve Norwegians sitting in the hall of the store, casting longing eyes at the last tin pounds of Lutebsk in the town. Said tin pounds having some moments before become the property of Tjalmer Tjalmer. Now perhaps you are acquainted with the Lutebsk and know how much I will try and tell you what I know about it. Not all for if I told you all I know about it you would say mean things about me in your paper. To begin with it is not a vegetable but a fish. So many people get confused. There is a legend is true. The no one would mistake fresh vegetables for Lutebsk. After the vegetables are ripened longer than nature intended them to, the similarity begins. And of course both should be kept in a cellar. And one who handles them should always be provided with gas masks. A patent clothes pin on the nose will answer in the absence of a mask. I don't know what the fish lives on but I imagine that they all die from eating too much Lutebsk. There is an over dose of perfume "de la Skunk." One lb is enough to supply fragrance for the average city block that is infested with garlic and such animals. Now can you imagine how in the world anyone could simply because he is denied the privilege of sinking his molars into that meat? No explaining human nature though.

Your friend Keppler had a bad accident this summer. He was making an Alpine climb to a mine he had and collected the present officers who are: P. J. Wood, President, L. M. Alexander, Vice President, Guy O. Babcock, Cashier, and E. C. Wittig, Assistant Cashier.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Ray of Plainfield celebrated their Golden wedding on January 1st, the celebration being in the nature of a surprise party.

As a result the old boy carried away silver around with him than he could ever have hoped to get out of one mine. And he will never be in any danger of spending it which will be all right with Keppler.

HAY STACK BURNED

A hay stack belonging to Henry Gettschlag was burned Monday morning, the hay being on the eastern limits of the city where it was impossible to reach it with the city water, although an alarm was sounded and the engine and hose company went to the scene of the conflagration. There were about six tons of hay in the stack, it being some that Mr. Gettschlag had hauled in from the marsh.

Later trucks were discovered about the haystack and it was concluded that somebody had set the hay afire, and the result was that John Glope was arrested as the person who had done it. He was taken before Judge Gettschlag Monday afternoon, where he was given a hearing after considerable questioning admitted that he had set the fire. He was bound over to await trial at the circuit court.

MARSHFIELD BEATEN

The basket ball game last evening between Company K of this city and the Marshfield team resulted in a victory for the home boys by a score of 49 to 47. It was stated that two of the regular men of the Marshfield team were unable to attend which may have made the game more one-sided than it otherwise would have been.

The next basket ball game will be on Friday evening of next week, when the Stevens Point team will be here. It is my intention to play two games and win a game apiece. It is expected that the coming game will be a warm one.

SHOCK FROM LIVE WIRE KILLS WORKMAN

John H. Walton, who was employed at the Biron mill as chief electrician was killed instantly on Tuesday by coming in contact with the wire that carries the high tension current between Biron and this city.

Nobody saw the accident and it is not known just exactly how it happened, but it is known that Mr. Walton was fixing a line that went into one of the houses at Biron, being at work on one of the poles. While at work it is supposed that he forgot for a moment the high tension wires that were strung on the pole just above him, and that he straightened up enough so that his head came in contact with the wire. These wires carry a tension of 32,000 volts, and any person coming in contact with them is pretty apt to receive enough of the current to cause instant death, which is supposed to be the case in the instance noted above.

Mrs. Walton fell across the lower wires on the pole and remained there until seen and taken down by some of the workmen at the mill. At that time he was dead and there was no chance of resuscitating him.

Mr. Walton was a man 43 years of age, and has a wife and five children living at Biron. He has been employed in the mill there during the past 7 years, and was liked and respected by all who knew him. The funeral will occur on Friday morning from the city house at Biron, the remains to be interred in Forest Hill cemetery in this city.

A NARROW ESCAPE

ROOSEVELT DIES AT OYSTER BAY

Great American Succumbs to
Complication of Diseases.

RESULT OF BRAZILIAN TRIP

Sketch of the Former President's Remarkable Career as Rancher, Statesman, Soldier, Explorer and Author.—Lost One Son in War.

New York, Col. Theodore Roosevelt died at his home in Oyster Bay early Monday morning.

The immediate cause of death, it was stated by one of his physicians, was pulmonary embolism, or lodgment in the lung of a clot from a broken vein.

Colonel Roosevelt's last illness may be said to date from last February. On February 5, it was announced that he had been removed to his home in Oyster Bay to the Roosevelt hospital in this city, following an operation on one of his eyes. Soon after his arrival at the hospital he underwent two more operations for the removal of diseased tissue in his infected ear, and it was admitted at the time that he was seriously ill. He remained at the hospital until March 3.

During May and June the colonel made a number of addresses, speaking at Springfield, Mass., and in New York. In June he made a tour of the West, during which he suffered a slight attack of erysipelas in one of his legs. Early in November the colonel was taken to Roosevelt hospital in this city for the treatment of rheumatism and sciatica. While in the hospital he became seriously ill, and his physicians would admit, Colonel Roosevelt returned to his home in Oyster Bay on Christmas day.

Was Typical American.

Theodore Roosevelt, who was known as "the most typical American" throughout his career, had been famous for "setting records." He was the youngest president the nation ever had, succeeding to the office on William McKinley's death at the age of forty-two. He set a high mark for service to the public, having been a New York state legislator, a United States civil service commissioner, president of the New York police board, assistant secretary of the navy, colonel in the Spanish war, governor of New York, vice president of the United States and president.

Colonel Roosevelt is held to have had as diverse interests and as wide acquaintance with all phases of life as any man in history. In addition to his immense political activities, he was the author of many books on travel, sport, history, politics and other subjects, was a fighter for reform from the moment he first appeared in city politics in New York, a holder of many university degrees, an orator, a lecturer, great hunter, athlete, international power and militant leader of his followers at all times, whether in or out of office.

Was Born in New York City.

Theodore Roosevelt was born October 27, 1858, in New York City. His father was Theodore Roosevelt, a prominent lawyer, and his mother was Martha Stewart. The boy began life with a small, frail body and not robust health. His ambition from youth was to be strong, an athlete, a doer of great deeds and a scholar as well. His remarkable mental endowment was given in the way he accomplished the dual object in life so that after seven years and a half as president, during which he promulgated important reforms and national laws, he went to Africa and for nearly a year was a hunter in the jungles, undergoing hardships, but coming out more robust and active than ever.

It was predicted that Africa would kill Roosevelt, but in a few days' time he had changed the hunting shirt for the clothes of the diplomat and was being hailed and welcomed with honors in the courts of Europe.

Starts His Political Career.

Roosevelt completed his education at Harvard university in 1880 and the same year married Alice Hathaway Lee, daughter of Gov. Robert Lee of New York. She lived only four years and was the mother of the present Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, wife of Congressman Nicholas Longworth of Cincinnati, O.

Colonel Roosevelt's interest in politics dates from the year after his marriage to Miss Lee. Some of the Republican district leaders in New York had taken an interest in him, he seemed a likely young fellow, with vigor and ambition and some money. Two years later he was sent to the state assembly at Albany and began a career which marked him out as a man devoted to the public interest.

After three years of assembly, however, Roosevelt thought he had enough, and for a time withdrew from public life. He stepped out coolly and boldly as the corrupt politician, disliked by many voters. New York was already hailed as the acknowledged leader of the reform element in his party. The death of his wife also was a factor in his temporary retirement, and he went to a ranch in North Dakota, where he was introduced as "that four-eyed tenderfoot."

The tender foot, however, put in practice some fundamental rules for handling a few minutes.

MASSAGE TO CURE BRUISE

Treatment May Be Relied On to Alleviate Pain, Frequently in Remarkably Short Time.

Massage is exceptionally useful in treating bruises, particularly in severe contusions due to external violence. The rubbing should be done with the stroking movement using the fingers or the palms, and always directed from the center of the bruise. In this way relief from the pain will often be obtained in a few minutes.

MANY EPIDEMICS OF "FLU"

Disease Has Swept Over the World in at Least Four Centuries, According to History.

Most of us think that the influenza is a comparatively modern disease, but this is not so. We have records of it as far back as 1773 and from 1510 on it is recorded as devastating the same influenza epidemic that has just swept over the world in the sixteenth century there were three such epidemics.

and Illustrative Service of Former President Extolled by His Countrymen, Regardless of Party.

Americans of all shades of political opinion have joined in paying warm tribute to the fearless Americanism of Col. Theodore Roosevelt and to the great service the dead leader rendered to his country and to all mankind.

There are some of the expressions of public grief and private sorrow following the loss the nation has sustained.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE LANSING—The death of Col. Roosevelt removes from our national life a great American. His vigor of mind and ceaseless energy made him a conspicuous figure in public affairs. Friends and enemies alike recognized the force of his personality and the great influence he had in molding public thought and purpose.

His patriotism and devotion to his country will long remain a source of inspiration to all his fellow citizens, while his sturdy Americanism will be an inspiration to the future generations.

GOVERNOR AND PRESIDENT.

Coming back from the war, Roosevelt was elected governor of New York. But he would not be lapsed by the politicians, so instead of giving him a second term they persuaded him to take the nomination for vice president in 1900.

When President McKinley, shot by an assassin, died on September 14, 1901, Roosevelt became president.

President Roosevelt served out McKinley's unexpired term and was elected president in 1901 by the largest majority ever given a candidate for the office. In his seven and a half years in the White House he had ample opportunity to show the stuff that was in him. He lived deeply and broadly and was at once the accomplished man of the world, the student of national problems, as well as of books, the adroit politician, the forceful writer of books and eloquent public speaker.

He had the happy knack of inventing or reviving phrases that stayed in the memory of his hearers and those who heard him usually carried away with them an apt summary of conditions, or a phrase worded as to be not easily forgotten.

Colonel Roosevelt's stand, from his first cry for the "square deal" to his fight for a second elective term in 1912, was always on the basis of social justice and on the platform of elevating the condition of the working and middle classes. Along this line developed his demand for the initiative, referendum and the recall of judges and judicial decisions.

As president, Roosevelt's activities and service were so numerous and so varied that he became a great international figure through his many negotiations with foreign powers and took in hand many problems at home seldom touched by a president.

Bears Taft for Presidency.

Roosevelt declined a second elective term in 1908 and fostered the candidacy of his secretary of war, William H. Taft, who was elected president. When he left office, March 4, 1909, Roosevelt was the unquestioned leader of his party. Taft was his close friend, Roosevelt went to Africa to secure game for his museum and also, it is understood, to be out of the country and escape possible accusations of attempting to influence the conduct of the new administration.

Colonel Roosevelt was a mighty hunter. His exploits in killing big game in equatorial Africa are well known through the book which he wrote on the subject.

It was in the summer of 1910 that Colonel Roosevelt traveled through the country promulgating his doctrine of the "new nationalism," and the next year he editorially attacked arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France, proposed by President Taft.

Candidate of Progressives.

At the Republican convention in Chicago, beginning June 18, 1912, Taft was nominated by 21 votes over a majority, but a few hours before the nomination Roosevelt had withdrawn his name as a candidate, and that night at a meeting in Rochester hall, Chicago, the Progressive party was given its first real impetus in a demonstration for Roosevelt and at which he was named for president by the party.

A formal convention was held later and he ran as the regular candidate of the third party, drawing support from Republicans and Democrats alike, Woodrow Wilson, the Democrat, was elected, however, and the colonel had to be content with defeating Mr. Taft for second place.

In 1914 Colonel Roosevelt led a party of exploration in South America, especially in the interior of Brazil. Then he made another tour of Europe. In 1916 he was again considered as a candidate for the presidential nomination by the Progressives, but at the last minute he declined the honor, declaring his intention of supporting Mr. Hughes, the Republican nominee. Since that time he had devoted his efforts largely to the task of teaching the need of a "preparedness" and to helping, with his pen, in the war against the central powers. He sought a chance to serve in the army, but was rejected. His three sons were officers in active service, and one, Quentin, was killed in an airplane combat.

WORK WHILE AT WORK.

It's a good thing not to take your hobbies to the office. It's also a good thing to dispense with easy chairs and other luxuries in your place of business. Take the rest cure at home. The office is a place of toil. It should be comfortable, but its appointments should be suggestive of work and efficiency rather than leisure. Instead of making a man feel like taking a nap the office environment should be an urge to his best efforts.

Handy Plant in Desert.

In the desert of Sonora, Mexico, there is a plant, the gourd, which husbands its water supply. The gourd is a relative of the squash and pumpkin, and inhabits a locality in which practically all the rain falls within a period of six weeks. The base of the stem is swollen to form a hard, woody structure, which, in time, attains the size of a large squash. It is really nothing more than a vegetable reservoir designed to hoard up the scanty moisture and dole out the precious fluid in time of need.

ROOSEVELT DIES AT OYSTER BAY

Great American Succumbs to
Complication of Diseases.

RESULT OF BRAZILIAN TRIP

Sketch of the Former President's Remarkable Career as Rancher, Statesman, Soldier, Explorer and Author—Lost One Son in War.

New York.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt died at his home in Oyster Bay early Monday morning.

The immediate cause of death, it was stated by one of his physicians, was pulmonary embolism, or blood clot in the lung of a clot from a broken vein.

Colonel Roosevelt's last illness may be dated to date from last February. On February 5, it was announced that he had been removed from his home in Oyster Bay to the Roosevelt hospital in this city, following an operation on one of his ears.

Soon after his arrival at the hospital he underwent two arduous operations for the removal of diseased tissue in his infected ear, and it was admitted at the time that he was seriously ill. He remained at the hospital until March 3.

During May and June the colonel made a number of addresses, speaking at Springfield, Mass., and at New York. In June he suffered a slight attack of dyspepsia in one of his legs.

Early in November the colonel was taken to Roosevelt hospital in this city for the treatment of rheumatism and sciatica. While in the hospital his condition became critical, and his physicians were more seriously concerned.

Colonel Roosevelt returned to his home in Oyster Bay on Christmas day.

Was Typical American.

Theodore Roosevelt, who was known as "the most typical American" throughout his career, had been famous for "setting records." He was the youngest president the nation ever had, succeeding to the office on William McKinley's death at the age of forty-two.

He set a high mark for having been a New York legislator, national convention delegate, United States civil service commissioner, president of the New York police board, assistant secretary of the navy, colonel in the Spanish war, governor of New York, vice president of the United States and president.

Colonel Roosevelt is held to have had no dissimilar interests and as wide acquaintance with all phases of life as any man in history. In addition to his immense political activities, he was the author of many books on travel, sports, history, politics and other subjects, was a fighter for reform from the moment he first appeared in city politics in New York, and a holder of many positions of degrees, an orator, a lecturer, a hunter, athlete, international penman and militant leader of his followers at all times, whether in or out of office.

Was Born in New York City.

Theodore Roosevelt was born October 27, 1858, in New York city. His father was Theodore Roosevelt and his mother was Martha. The boy began life as a small, frail child, and a robust health. His ambition from youth was to be a strong, athletic, a doer of great deeds and a scholar as well. His remarkable mental endowment was shown in the way he accomplished the dual object in life so that after seven years and a half as president of the United States, he was still a student, during which he pursued a number of subjects, and national issues, he went to Africa and for nearly a year was a hunter in the jungles, undergoing hardships, but coming out more robust and active than ever.

It was predicted that Africa would kill Roosevelt, but in a few days time he had changed the hunter's shirt for the clothes of a diplomat and was being utilized and showered with honors in the courts of Europe.

Starts His Political Career.

Roosevelt completed his education at Harvard university in 1880, and the same year married Alice Hathaway Lee, daughter of George Cabot Lee of New York. She lived only four years and was the mother of the present Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, wife of Congressman Nicholas Longworth of Cleveland, O.

Colonel Roosevelt's interest in politics dates from the year after his marriage to Miss Lee. Some of the Republican district leaders in New York had taken an interest in him. He seemed a likely young fellow, with vigor, ambition and some money. Two years later he was sent to the state assembly at Albany and began a career which marked him out as a man devoted to the public interest.

After three years of assembly, however, Roosevelt thought he had enough, and for a time withdrew from public life. He stepped out cordially hated by the corrupt politicians, disliked by the wealthy New Yorkers and almost universally regarded as a man of the people, a reformer in his party.

The death of his wife also was a factor in his temporary retirement, and he went to a ranch in North Dakota, where he was introduced as "that four-eyed tenderfoot."

The tenderfoot, however, put in practice some fundamental rules for handling a few minutes.

Massage to Cure Bruise.

Treatment May Be Relied On to Alleviate Pain, Frequently in Remarkably Short Time.

Massage is exceptionally useful in treating bruises, particularly in severe contusions due to external violence. The rubbing should be done with a stroking movement, using the fingers or the palms, and always directed from the center of the bruise. In this way relief from the pain will often be obtained in a few minutes.

GREAT LOSS TO THE NATION

Pure Patriotism, Unfailing Courage,
and Illustrious Service of Former
President Extolled by His Countrymen, Regardless of Party.

Americans of all shades of political opinion have joined in paying warm tribute to the fearless Americanism of Col. Theodore Roosevelt and the great service he rendered to his country and to all mankind.

There are some of the expressions of public men and private citizens telling of the loss the nation has sustained:

SECRETARY OF STATE LANSING.—The death of Col. Roosevelt is a great American loss. His vigor of mind and ceaseless energy made him a conspicuous figure in public affairs. Friends and enemies alike recognized the force of his personality and the great influence he had in molding public thought and purpose.

His devotion to his country will long be remembered by all his fellow citizens, while his sturdy Americanism will be an inspiration to future generations.

ACTING SECRETARY OF STATE FRANK POLK.—His was one of the most striking figures in the history of this country, and, in fact, of his time. It is impossible to measure the political consequences of the political career of Col. Roosevelt.

NEWTON D. BAKER, Secretary of War.—His original belief in the army, and of course, a part of the history of those two services, and his powerful personality and energy to bear upon economic problems of the greatest moment.

JOSEPH W. BAKER, Secretary of the Navy.—He has blazed new paths and refused to be fettered by conventions that other distinguished leaders followed. His original belief in the army, and of course, a part of the history of those two services, and his powerful personality and energy to bear upon economic problems of the greatest moment.

GREAT LOSS TO THE NATION

Pure Patriotism, Unfailing Courage,
and Illustrious Service of Former
President Extolled by His Countrymen, Regardless of Party.

Americans of all shades of political opinion have joined in paying warm tribute to the fearless Americanism of Col. Theodore Roosevelt and the great service he rendered to his country and to all mankind.

There are some of the expressions of public men and private citizens telling of the loss the nation has sustained:

SECRETARY OF STATE LANSING.—The death of Col. Roosevelt is a great American loss. His vigor of mind and ceaseless energy made him a conspicuous figure in public affairs. Friends and enemies alike recognized the force of his personality and the great influence he had in molding public thought and purpose.

His devotion to his country will long be remembered by all his fellow citizens, while his sturdy Americanism will be an inspiration to future generations.

ACTING SECRETARY OF STATE FRANK POLK.—His was one of the most striking figures in the history of this country, and, in fact, of his time. It is impossible to measure the political consequences of the political career of Col. Roosevelt.

VICTOR BERGER AND FOUR FOUND GUILTY

U. S. Jury Hits Socialists as Aids

ALL FACE PRISON SENTENCE

Finding Bare Milwaukee Politician
Publisher From Congress—Defendants
Bonds Each Pending Motion for New Trial.

Chicago, Jan. 9.—Victor L. Berger, Milwaukee politician-publisher, and the only Socialist elected last fall to the Sixty-sixth congress, and four other national leaders of the Socialist party, were found guilty of espionage and disloyalty under the Espionage act by a jury in Judge Landis' court.

Berger's conviction bars him from congress.

Those convicted with Berger for obstructing the nation's war program against Germany and now facing sentences from one to twenty years in a federal prison, fines from $1,000 to $10,000, or both, are:

Adolph Germer, national secretary of the Socialist party.

William P. Kruse, national secretary of the Young People's Socialist party.

Louis Engel, editor of the American Socialist and a party leader.

Irvin St. John Tucker, Protestant Episcopal minister, former newspaper man, and "red" propagandist.

Sentence is Withheld.

The five defendants were released under $10,000 bonds each pending hearing of a motion for a new trial on January 23. Sentence was withheld by Judge Landis at that time.

The verdict—a sweeping victory for the government—was a terrific blow to the defendants. They had confidently believed that the five weeks of radical "preaching" given before the jury had "converted" at least one. None, save Berger, had counted upon an acquittal, but all had believed a "hung jury" would result.

While out from 11 a. m. until 4:43 p. m., the jury took but three ballots. The second 10 to 2 for conviction, the third 11 to 1, and the third was a unanimous "guilty."

The courtroom was jammed with Socialists, I. W. W., bolsheviks and every division coming under the "red flag" when the jury made its finding. With all business suspended in the federal building in honor of Theodore Roosevelt during the afternoon, they had packed the courtroom.

As the verdict was read, the crowd in charge of the jury, appeared and announced a verdict of a squad of plain clothes men and deputy marshals took possession. They scattered throughout the courtroom prepared to meet any demonstration. But none occurred. Even the most radical of the radicals in that place of justice seemed stunned.

Berger appeared almost lifeless as he sat, his huge bulk crunched up in a chair behind his array of counsel. He seemed more deeply moved than the others, tears streaming down on his cheeks. He did not look up even when Joseph O'Sullivan, the counsel clerk, called the names of the defendants.

After the jurors had filed back to their room Berger was surrounded by his wife, two daughters and a score of women. The other defendants nervously wandered about the room.

Pigeons' Part in Winning War

Uncanny Instinct of Homers Saved Lives of Many Soldiers During Struggle Just Ended

THE records of this war are replete with stories of the courageous work performed by carrier pigeons while saving the lives of our soldiers, but no incident better illustrates what they have accomplished than their activities in the battle of Bethune and Dead Man's hill. An entire French regiment was cut off from their comrades, completely surrounded for four days, and with no method of communicating with their plights in the general command. That fourth night one of the men scouting in No Man's Land stumbled over a dead comrade on whose back was strapped a basket carrying two little pigeons that during the four-day battle had been safeguarded by the body of their carrier. Tenderly the scout brought the basket and birds back to the command on the hill. Early the next morning messages were written, affixed to the legs of the birds, which, exhausted and disheveled, but imbued with indomitable spirit and pluck, were liberated—waited in the air by the prayers and wishes of the regiment, hearing with them the only remaining hope for these thousands of men and the happiness of other thousands in their families at home. Shortly afterward both birds fluttered ventrally into their lost back at headquarters; and in a note ordered by the general the enemy was driven back and the regiment saved.

One of the officers, at that regiment is now in Washington, and he has promised himself that now the war is over he will have a lot of the best birds he can get, and the best care and attention that is possible will be put into a study of his measure of appreciation and gratitude to the little feathered messengers to whom he and his comrades owe their lives.

These little birds have been used in almost every conceivable way to get word back to the reserves or to headquarters when all other means of communication failed.

Carrier pigeons are not only used by the infantry and the navy, but are used frequently by the air service. At the Funkhler hydroplane station they have an enviable record. There has not been a single accident to a plane, nor the loss of a plane in combat, where word of the occurrence was not brought back by the pigeons which are a part of the equipment of the planes. Instances of the value of the messengers could be multiplied without number, but it is more interesting to recount how these birds are used, reared and housed under war conditions.

The pigeon's ability to do all of these wonderful tasks lies in the faculty of orientation, that is, its power to know as soon as it is released in which direction its home loft is and to fly directly to it. The perfection to which orientation is developed in the highly bred and trained homing pigeon is demonstrated at a pigeon fly conducted by the pigeon section of the signal corps, when 3,000 homing pigeons were released in Washington for a fly to New York city, 224 miles. To a single bird, these pigeons ran out of their coops and arose in the air with the speed of an express train, and after taking a half circle to get their bearings were off for New York. Every one of the pigeons were reported to have arrived promptly, and the first arrival made the trip in 5 hours and 40 minutes. Surely it did not stop to read many sign posts on the way.

Just how the homing pigeon developed this power of orientation is a moot question, but it is certain that it has been cultivated through centuries until now it is almost uncanny. What guides the pigeon back to the loft where it first "took to the air" is a quality called by many names, and you will find that each person knows that he has the answer to the riddle. Some call it innate love of home; others attribute it to faculty, atmospheric conditions, sight, or memory. Personally, I cannot call it anything more or less than instinct, highly developed. We find it in lesser degree in horses, dogs and cats, and in other birds it seems to be developed a little less markedly, but with sufficient accuracy so that they migrate annually thousands of miles without the aid of any other compass than their instinct. When we remember the potent power of selection and think of the years and generations of careful breeding and selection which the homing pigeon has undergone it is not so wonderful that they have developed the homing instinct to a high degree. I have seen their cousins, the fantailed pigeons, bred to such a degree of fineness that they weighed only a few ounces apiece and were so nervous that they could not stand still—they were like the hula-hula of a watch, constantly preening and ducking and on the move. In very early times homing pigeons were in vogue in Egypt, Greece and among the Romans. Racing pigeons has been a royal and national sport in Belgium, France, Italy, Turkey, Egypt and England for hundreds of years. It was introduced into this country in the seventies and has enjoyed a fair and steady growth until now there are three national homing pigeon associations with a membership of more than 2,000 breeders.

Much time is spent in teaching the pigeon all of the tricks which count when the bird is actually racing in competition with other pigeons. It is taught to enter the loft immediately upon its return, for a bird that does not enter so the message it carries can be taken from it is of very little value as a messenger. Nothing is more unexpedient in the fancier or racer than to have the pigeon return and cool its anatomy and view the scenery for a half hour before entering the loft. It is nearly sufficient cause to make the trainer of pigeons lose his faith in pigeon nature; besides it gives the neighbors a chance to make remarks about the pigeon's play with trifles. Once the bird is inside the loft it cannot emerge, since each loft is equipped with a trap through which the bird can enter at any time but cannot go out unless the trap is set for exit.

The ordinary barn variety of pigeon or those bred for the production of squabs for market and the racing homing pigeon should not be confused. They are as distinct and have as many points of difference as have the big draft horse and the high-strung, nervous racing horse. The ordinary pigeon has very little homing ability, whereas the homing pigeon is kept and bred exclusively for that faculty. They are also bred for speed, and every muscle which is used in flight is developed almost at the expense of the other muscles of its body. In races the actual speed recorded is almost beyond belief. Speeds of 1,530 to 1,900 yards per minute, or 60 miles per hour, have been made for short distances, and it is not extraordinary for a bird to cover in excess of 300 miles in a single day. The record for 1,000 miles is 1 day, 11 hours, 24 minutes and 11 seconds, and was made by a bird named Bullet, and the longest successful race was 1,689 miles from Denver, Colo., to Springfield, Mass. (time 22 days, 3 hours, 22 minutes), although instances are recorded where birds sent from New York to the Pacific coast as breeders, have, on liberation or escape, returned from California, over the mountains and plains to their old homes in New York.

At various times in this country the army and navy have decided to use the carrier pigeon in their work, but with indifferent success until the recent war. The old reports are, rather amusing when considered in the light of present-day knowledge of what can be done with the birds when handled properly. Pigeons were used in the navy more than 20 years ago, but failed through lack of proper care. At the time of the Mexican border trouble pigeons were again tried, but with little success for the same reason and through lack of time for acclimation.

Homing pigeons were first put on a business-like basis in the army in March, 1917, in the eastern department. In November of that year the pigeon section of the land division of the signal corps was organized, and since then rapid progress has been made in this country and abroad. Hundreds of lofts have been built and equipped in this country, and in the early days many pigeons were shipped overseas. Many have been selected and trained in the science of pigeon breeding, rearing and flying. Many of these have already found service overseas in the care of lofts and the birds of our armies. It has been necessary to train a large number of people in this work, as it was practically new to each person who took it up. The training of officers and men in the use and care of the birds at the front and in the forwarding of messages all took time. Unfortunately the pigeons could only fly and could not talk, necessitating the writing of the messages. Some have had proposals to improve the pigeon by crossing it with a parrot, thus eliminating the necessity of writing the messages. However, the pigeon might have something to say about the matter.

One of the most difficult parts of the work of introducing pigeons into the army service was to instill into the minds of the officers and men the fact that the pigeons are reliable. That they are reliable is proved by the experience overseas, where the birds are retained in forward positions while any other method, whether telephone, telegraph, induction buzzer, wireless, winging or runner is available, and only when everything else fails, and only the birds remain, then through berrings, gas, and every other of the diabolical inventions of war, more than 97 per cent of the messages entrusted to our pigeons are safely and speedily delivered by them to headquarters. These messengers are carried to the front in especially constructed wicker baskets which can be carried handily by the soldier entrusted with their care. Back of the lines the pigeons are kept in either of two kinds of lofts or homes, stationary or movable, but the essential feature of each is the same. Every effort is made to make each bird comfortable, happy and attached to its home. This is done most effectively by the method of feeding, as the approach to the bird's affection is through its stomach, the same as with game birds. Each loft is equipped with a trap through which the birds are taught to enter and leave without fear. Each time the bird enters the trap an alarm is automatically ringing, notifying the attendant of the return of the bird, but the message may be immediately obtained and forwarded to headquarters.

Before the late war if you had told a pigeon fancier that you could move his pigeon loft as far as 50 miles and that the pigeons would return to it swiftly and accurately he would probably have laughed at you and said something about your being a novice in the pigeon racing and breeding game. The movable loft is one of the advances in pigeon lore that the war has brought out. This is a very important development, as it is highly desirable that the loft always be near to military headquarters and available for instant removal with headquarters as conditions may require. These movable lofts are very well constructed and are interesting homes for these itinerant messengers. They are outfitted with nesting boxes, observation traps, storage space for feed, water, and accommodations for one or two attendants who are constantly on duty. In fact, they remind one of the circus wagons that travel with the smaller circuses about the country.

Another innovation developed was the "food express." There were pigeons at the front that developed the faculty for seeing at night and these were called veritable human night owls. In fact, they came home much more steadily and accurately than some of their civilian brethren, who were wont to be habitual riders of the "owl express."

The sport of racing and breeding pigeons is due to receive an impetus as a civilian sport now that the war is ended, and the progress made under war conditions should not be overlooked. Thousands of soldiers will have become familiar with the birds and will have a warm regard for them. There will be many who will share the feeling of the officer who was mentioned in the first part of this article as having been saved by the pigeons in the battle of Bethune and Dead Man's hill.

The loading position of the truck is directly at the bottom of the 25 per cent grade and the truck must climb this grade from a standing start. As high as two tons have been handled in a single load in this fashion. One of the serious problems that has confronted this manufacturer is the handling of flasks and storage material on filled ground; to overcome this is a portable board truck with flat planks as rails, made and used with no difficulty encountered in running at full speed over this track—a distance of 150 feet.

Badger State Happenings

Wausau—The woodchuck is the problem which is troubling officials. The county board voted to discontinue the payment of a bounty of 25 cents for each woodchuck. In 1918 bounty was paid on more than 45,000 animals. The great amount of work attached to the payment, the making out of certificates, etc., frequently hampered farm work of the town chairmen, which resulted in the discontinuance of the bounty. Now it is realized that the woodchuck during the season will consume and destroy enough food to provide for a sheep. Another meeting of the board will be held and it is thought the bounty will be restored.

This necessitates a doubling of the present appropriation of $200,000. Quick Change in Style of Gowns

New York.—It is time to change a few things in women's apparel, asserts a prominent fashion authority. Women are longing from uniforms into medieval gowns of gold, and ermine, and tulle in brilliant colors, and into smashing furs and red street apparel. There are significant changes working up from the ground. There is the new décolletage which was prophesied in this department weeks ago and which is coming into view as smart women exploit it. Until a dozen new ways of cutting the neckline have leaped into existence and a dozen new collars claim the blue ribbon of excellence. No matter whether we dress differently about the hips and feet, we are dressing decidedly differently about the neck and even the wrists.

It is in these significant changes that the great mass of women are interested who do not feel that they can afford entirely new gowns for the mid-season.

The artist who said that all changes in fashions for women consisted in the placement of the bulge, or the absence of it, should have added that the open spaces in costumes were second in importance.

Cut to the bone, there is no doubt that he was right. The contour is the thing. It is where a garment goes in or out that determines its fashion. Few women there are who are savvy enough to go against the contour of the hour, even though it may not suggest the best there is in their figures.

New Décolletage.—The change in the neckline is perhaps the most important to the average woman. She has believed in herself when it comes to cutting a new kind of neckline. She feels that a good pair of scissors may be the medium of transforming an old gown into a new gown by the simple process of turning an oblong neck into a round one, a square one, or a U-shaped one.

Double Neckline.—There is a disposition on the part of some designers to make a double neckline, and this they do by a subtle

V-shaped décolletage in back of a black velvet evening gown which is cut high in front. This idea is worked out in many types of gowns, even those for street. Delta décolletage shown in new brocade evening gown in white and gold. This neckline originated in the Elizabethan days.

All history is filled with rapid changes in the neckline, and so far we have not had anything new. We have run the heels of history all over again. That is all.

When Edward II was king of England the women wore the gorgeously, which wrinkled about the neck and spread outward over the chin and the back of the head. This was introduced to fashion a few years ago through a dancer and her clever designer. It is still worn by women who go untripped and they make it of dark blue crepe or velvet, rather than of white satin.

When Richard II was king his French queen brought over the fashion of the low neck, and so, after centuries, women dropped the neckband of the gown from chin to collar bone.

When Elizabeth was queen of England the décolletage was introduced, and it ran along with another neckline that exposed all the chest and half the shoulders, and then, as if by a sudden spasm of prudery, hid the neck and ears by an immense ruff.

When James I came to the throne of England his queen introduced the very décolleté, tight bodices with its immense, flaring collar of wired lace at the back, and when Charles I allowed Henriette of France to lead the fashions for his court, there was the low, round neckline that dipped well downward in the back and was finished with a deep vandyke collar that extended over the sleeves.

In the picturesque days of Queen Anne women introduced the low, square cut décolletage, gutless of collar, which our women have worn for two decades; and in the middle of the eighteenth century, in the Georgian era, women used a simple décolletage in a rounded V outlined with a wrinkled handkerchief as a part of their street attire.

To clean your black coat sponge it with strong black coffee to which a few drops of ammonia have been added. Then rub with a piece of dark woolen cloth.

Gems and muffins are not so liable to stick if you simply wipe the pans with a damp cloth instead of washing them. This should be done as soon as the contents are removed, and then the pan should be greased and put away.

Back a piece of old rubber over each support of the step ladder. It will steady the ladder and prevent possible falls. It will also protect the floors.

If you have no oxalic acid at hand you will find half a lemon dipped in salt quite as efficacious in cleaning copper or brass ware.

Always sweep rugs and carpets the way of the grain. Brushing against the grain roughens the surface and tends to brush the dust in instead of out.

Do not put the cover on the saucers when boiling cabbage and you will avoid the unpleasant odor in cooking.

summary of historical changes in the décolletage, it is easy to see that we have done nothing new; but here we have a new idea to do at the immediate moment. Revive the idea of the Elizabethan times, the deep square of Queen Anne, with its tight, high line at the side of the neck, and the U-shaped décolletage of the end of the eighteenth century, with its modest piece of lace.

Return of Lace Collars.—We have gone through a season of medieval severity in the neckline. Women have aided nature which made them ugly or chanted nature which made them beautiful by going about without any softening effect at the neck, by wearing coat collars of heavy homespun unrelieved by white, and by the use of V-shaped lines of heavy velvet and crepe which fashion kept unadorned.

True to history this was, but not true to art. There were few women who looked their best in such severity. Today collars return slowly. There are still those who tell you they are not smart, but at the exclusive house there is a tendency to put precious lace on the new neckline. It is not a V-shaped neckline; it is a deep U which calls for a softening outline and an extremely soft arrangement of lace or tulle across the bust.

The Queen Anne décolletage which hugs the side of the neck and runs down into a narrow V-shaped opening is extremely smart, and it is handled with fur and then filled in with fine folds of silk net.

It is felt by those who have their hands on the pulse of fashion that the oblong neckline of the Renaissance is no longer smart, although it is worn by some well-dressed women.

Double Neckline.—There is a disposition on the part of some designers to make a double neckline, and this they do by a subtle arrangement of thin fabrics. A certain designer has turned out a remarkably brilliant gown of raspberry chiffon having a deep U-shaped décolletage outlined with chinchilla which swings the chiffon with the movement of the figure, as though it were a necklace. Beneath it, and hugging the bust in the eighteenth century manner, is a bodice with a round décolletage.

There will be an oblong Renaissance neckline that reaches from shoulder to shoulder, cut on a tight satin bodice, and over that will be swung a looser bodice of colored chiffon or tulle which is high at the back and has a long, rounded line in front that drops to the waist.

Black and seal brown velvet afternoon gowns have the Queen Anne décolletage, which follows the exact line where the neck is placed on the body, until it gets to the collar bone, where it dips into a straight, open space half way to the waist. This is outlined with fur. Again, it may be outlined with Venetian point.

The delta décolletage is considered the most becoming of all for evening wear. Get out any picture of Elizabethan times and you will see what is meant. In that gorgeous era the women wore a devoted piece of open net over the shoulder to the base of the neck at each side, and then the décolletages spread downward and outward to the arm-pits.

Take this change in the neckline seriously. It will govern the clothes of the next few weeks.

White Collars.—In spite of the fact that some of the newest frocks have no white at the throat, and that others favor the rounded neck, with lace and a tucker, still others feature a white satin collar that is high at the neck and that extends in the front over the bodice quite to the waistline.

Cape Effects Noted.—Cape effects are noted in coat and street costume alike. One interesting little street frock showed a long cape-like panel, hanging from the shoulder to the hem of the frock, where it was attached to the skirt with several buttons. The street frock was made simple. It fastened at the front with a single row of buttons. There was a bodice and skirt. There was a high turn-down collar.

Carrying-on Alone

She went downtown for the peace celebration—a slender young woman, whose husband had been killed in one of the regiments sent to France. Some one, who knew her, expressed surprise at her being willing to take part in this celebration.

"When Billy went away he was quite a soldier," she told her friend. "He not only wore a uniform, but he had taken up what he termed military speech. The last thing he told me was: 'While I'm gone I want you to go on with a smile'."

Pigeons' Part in Winning War

Uncanny Instinct of Homers Saved Lives of Many Soldiers During Struggle Just Ended

THE records of this war are replete with stories of the courageous work performed by carrier pigeons while saving the lives of our soldiers, but no incident better illustrates what they have accomplished than the activities in the battle of Bethuncourt and Dead Man's hill. An entire French regiment was cut off from the front, completely surrounded for four days, and with no method of communicating with their platoon in the general command. That fourth night one of the men scouting in No Man's land stumbled over a dead pigeon, whose back was strapped a basket containing two little pigeons that during the four-day battle had been safeguarded by the body of their caretaker. Tenderly the scout brought the basket and birds back to the command on the hill. Early the next morning messages were written, affixed to the legs of the birds, which, exhausted and dust-soiled, but imbued with indomitable spirit and pluck, were liberated—waited in the air by the platoon and the platoon's platoon, bearing with them the only remaining hope for these thousands of men and the happiness of other thousands in their families at home. Shortly afterward both birds fluttered wearily into their loft back at headquarters; and in a hectic order by the general the enemy was driven back and the regiment saved.

One of the officers of that regiment is now in Washington, and he has promised himself that now the war is over he will have a loft of the best birds he can get, and the best care and attention that is possible will be but a slight part of his measure of appreciation and gratitude to the little feathered messengers to whom he and his comrades owe their lives.

These little birds have been used in almost every conceivable way to get word back to the reserves or to headquarters when all other means of communication failed. Carrier pigeons are not only used by the infantry and the navy, but are used frequently by the air service. At the Dunkirk hydroplane station they have an enviable record. There has not been a single accident to a plane, nor the loss of a plane in combat, where word of the occurrence was not brought back by the pigeon. Instances are a part of the equipment of the planes. Instances of the value of the messengers could be multiplied without number, but it is more interesting to recount how these birds are bred, reared and housed under war conditions.

The pigeon's ability to do all of these wonderful tasks lies in its faculty of orientation, that is, its power to know as soon as it is released in what direction its home loft is and to fly directly to it. The faculty of orientation is developed in what is called the "homing" pigeon, which was recently demonstrated at a pigeon fly conducted by the pigeon section of the signal corps, when 3,100 homing pigeons were released in Washington for a fly to New York city, 224 miles. To a single bird, these pigeons ran out of their coops and arose in the air with the speed of an express train, and after flying a half circle to get their bearings were reported to have arrived promptly and the first arrival made the trip in 5 hours and 40 minutes. Surely it did not stop to read many sign posts on the way.

Just how the homing pigeon developed this power of orientation is a moot question, but it is certain that it has been cultivated through centuries until now it is almost uncanny. What guides the pigeon back to the loft where it first "took to the air" is a quality called by many names, and you will find that each person knows one, and he has the answer to the riddle. Some call it innate love of home; others attribute it to faculty, atmospheric conditions, sight, or memory. Personally, I cannot call it anything more or less than instinct, highly developed, and in the lesser degree it seems to be developed a little less markedly, but with sufficient accuracy so that they migrate annually thousands of miles without the aid of any other compass than their instinct.

When we remember the potent power of selection and think of the years and generations of careful breeding and selection which the homing pigeon has undergone, it is not so wonderful that pigeon have developed the homing instinct to a high degree. I have seen their cousins, the fantailed pigeons, bred to such a degree of fineness that they weighed only a few ounces apiece and were

The loading position of the truck is directly at the bottom of the 25 per cent grade and the truck must climb this grade from a standing start. As high as two tons have been loaded in a single load in this fashion. One of the serious problems that has confronted this manufacturer is the handling of flasks and storage material on filled ground; to overcome this is a portable board track with flat planks as rails was made and no difficulty encountered in running at full speed over this track—a distance of 150 feet.

Quick Change in Style of Gowns

New York.—It is time to change a few things in women's apparel, asserts a prominent fashion authority. Women are leading the best in such matters. Revive the delta of the Elizabethan times, the deep square of Queen Anne, with its tight, high line at the side of the neck, and the U-shaped decolletage of the end of the eighteenth century, with its modesty piece of lace.

Return of Lace Collars.

We have gone through a season of medieval severity in the neckline. Women have aided nature which made them only of chested nature, which without any softening effect at the neck, by wearing collars of heavy homespun unrelieved by white, and by the use of V-shaped lines of heavy velvet and crepe which fashion kept unadorned.

True to history this was, but not true to art. There were few women who looked their best in such armor. Today collars return slowly. There are still those who tell you they are not smart, but at the exclusive house there is a tendency to put precious lace on the new neckline. It is not a V-shaped neckline; it is a deep U which calls for a softening of outline and an extremely soft arrangement of lace or tulle across the bust.

The Queen Anne decolletage which hugs the side of the neck and runs down into a narrow U-shaped opening is extremely smart, and it is banded with fur and then filled in with fine folds of silk net.

It is felt by those who have their hands on the pulse of fashion that the oblong neckline of the Renaissance is no longer smart, although it is worn by some well-dressed women.

Double Neckline.

There is a disposition on the part of some designers to make a double neckline, and this they do by a subtle

V-shaped decolletage in back of a black velvet evening gown which is set high in front. This idea is worked out in many types of gowns, even those for street. Delta decolletage shown in new brocade evening gown in white and gold. This neckline originated in the Elizabethan days.

All history is filled with rapid changes in the neckline, and so far we have not had anything new. We have run the bells of history all over again. That is all.

When Edward II was king of England the women wore the square gette, which was fastened about the neck and spread out over the chin and shoulders, and then as if by a sudden spasm of prudery, the neck and ears by an immense ruff.

When Richard II was king his French queen brought over the fashion of the low neck, and so, after centuries, women dropped the neckline of the gown from chin to collar bone.

When Elizabeth was queen of England the delta decolletage was invented, and it ran along with another neck line that exposed the chest and half the shoulders, and then as if by a sudden spasm of prudery, the neck and ears by an immense ruff.

When James I came to the throne of England his queen introduced the very décolleté, tight bodice with its immense, flaring collar of wired lace at the back, and when Charles I allowed Henriette of France to lead the fashions for his court there was the low, round neckline that dipped well downward in the back and was finished with a deep vandyke collar that extended over the sleeves.

In the picturesque days of Queen Anne women introduced the low, square cut decolletage, gutties of collar, which our women have worn for two decades; and in the middle of the eighteenth century, in the Georgian era, women used a simple decolletage in a rounded V outlined with a wrinkled handkerchief as a part of their street attire.

Running the mind over this slight summary of historical changes in the decolletage, it is easy to see that we have done nothing new; but here is what we are going to do at the immediate moment: Revive the delta of the Elizabethan times, the deep square of Queen Anne, with its tight, high line at the side of the neck, and the U-shaped decolletage of the end of the eighteenth century, with its modesty piece of lace.

White Collars.

In spite of the fact that some of the newest frocks have no white at the throat, and that others favor the rounded neck, with lace and a tucker, still others feature a white satin collar that is high at the neck and that extends in the front over the bodice quite to the waistline.

When you make a sponge cake, like an angel cake, whip the whites of eggs with a wire egg-beater. For a ungrained cake use the regular egg-beater.

To remove smoke stains from ivory, immerse in benzine and go over it with a brush.

Bonbonnets will not absorb the fat if you put a quarter of a teaspoonful of ginger into the dough. The spice will not affect the taste.

When knitting socks, if you knit a thread of silk or coarse crochet cotton in with the wool at the heel and toe they will wear longer.

Cape Effects Noted.

Cape effects are noted in coat and street costume. One interesting street frock showed a long cape-like panel hanging from the shoulder to the hem of the frock, where it was attached to the skirt with several buttons. The street frock was made simple. It fastened at the front with a single row of buttons. There was a material belt, and pockets trimmed the bodice and skirt. There was a high turn-down collar.

INDIANS HELD TO WIN WAR
Maahfield Herald—The old saying that only dead Indians are good Indians, will have to be changed for the time being, for the loyalty of the Indians in the north is being tested. In the north, the Indians are being held to win the war. The Indians are being held to win the war. The Indians are being held to win the war.

FARMERS!
ARE you giving your soil a fair shake, or are you continuing to let it work for you under a handicap? You are doing either one thing or the other.
You may be putting back all the manure you can possibly accumulate. This is good farm practice, but if you should put on twice as much as you are now doing, it would not correct the acidity that your soil has developed.
Conditions for the growth of legumes (clover, alfalfa, etc.) are not favorable in an acid soil. The only thing that will neutralize this acid and thus make conditions favorable for growing these necessary crops, is Lime.
Natural Ground Limestone is cheap and the freight rate is low. Now is the time to get it shipped and hauled home. Come in and let us give you some interesting information and quote you prices.

A boy who had gone to the priest of his parish for instruction, was asked by the good man, when our Savior died. "The boy said he did not know, whereupon the priest told him, he ought to be ashamed of himself. He then told the boy to tell his mother when he got home that he wanted to see her. A day or two later the mother called on the priest to tell her that he had sent for her on account of her son, who seemed very dumb, as he did not know when Christ died. Turning to the woman he said "I am going to ask you the same question." The woman hesitated a moment, then "your reverence" she began, "You know we live in a small village where no one takes a newspaper and I must confess I did not know he was sick."

What It Means to Have Money

When you have accumulated money, you gain with it character and self-reliance which others, who have also made money, recognize. These people know you because you have shown you have "the right stuff" in you, and you are offered more opportunities to make more money—and these opportunities you would never otherwise hear about.

It gives you a prominent place in your city and community.

It is not the money alone that does this, but the fact that you had the brains to start building your fortune and the courage to go through with it.

It means comfort, peace of mind and the satisfaction of knowing that should you be suddenly taken away, those dependent on you would not be left in poverty and misery.

You have no fear of the present or future—you have done your duty.

A boy who had gone to the priest of his parish for instruction, was asked by the good man, when our Savior died. The boy said he did not know, whereupon the priest told him, he ought to be ashamed of himself. He then told the boy to tell his mother when he got home that he wanted to see her. A day or two later the mother called. The priest told her that he had sent for her on account of her son, who seemed very dumb, as he did not know when Christ died. Turning to the woman he said "I am going to ask you the same question." The woman hesitated a moment. "Your reverence" she began, "You know we live in a small village where no one takes a newspaper and I must confess I did not know he was sick."

DANDRUFF MAKES HAIR FALL OUT

A small bottle of "Dandrine" keeps hair thick, strong, beautiful.

Girls! Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair in a few moments.

Within ten minutes after an application of Dandrine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Dandrine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scruffy. Just moisten a cloth with Dandrine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Dandrine for a few cents at any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that all you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Dandrine—Advt.

Told of His Own Death.

John H. Everett was awakened to receive a telegram from Washington conveying the information that he had been killed in action in France. WOMEN SUFFERERS MAY NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kalm's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you wish to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kalm & Co., Birmingham, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advt.

President Wilson Cables Proclamation on Death of Theodore Roosevelt.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO LEADER

In Cablegram From Paris Executive Doolittle Former President's Life an Example for Every American—Orders Military Honors for Dead.

Washington, Jan. 8.—The following proclamation on the death of Theodore Roosevelt was cabled from Paris by President Wilson and issued at the state department:

"Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States:

"It becomes my sad duty to announce officially the death of Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States from September 14, 1901, to March 4, 1909, which occurred at his home at Sagamore Hill, Oyster Bay, N. Y., at 4:15 o'clock in the morning on January 6, 1919.

"In his death the United States has lost one of its most distinguished and patriotic citizens, who had endeavored himself to the people by his strenuous devotion to their interests and to the public interests of his country.

"As president of the police board of his native city, member of the legislature and governor of his state, as civil service commissioner, as assistant secretary of the navy, as vice president and as president of the United States, he displayed administrative powers of a signal order and conduct of the affairs of these various offices with a concentration of effort and a vigilant care which permitted no divergence from the line of duty he had definitely set for himself.

"In the war with Spain he displayed singular initiative and energy and distinguished himself among the commanders of the army in the field. As president he woke the nation to the dangers of private control which lurked in our financial and industrial systems.

"It was by thus arresting the attention and stimulating the purpose of the country that he opened the way for subsequent necessary and beneficial reforms.

"His private life was characterized by a sturdy, a virtue and an asceticism worthy of all admiration and emulation by the people of America.

"In testimony of the respect in which his memory is held by the government and people of the United States I do hereby direct that the flags of the White House and the several departmental buildings be displayed at half-staff for a period of 30 days, that suitable military and naval honors under orders of the secretaries of war and of the navy be rendered on the day of the funeral.

"Done this 7th day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and nineteen, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-third.

"WOODROW WILSON,

"By the President:

"Frank L. Polk,

"Acting Secretary of State."

Vice President Marshall, acting as the personal representative of President Wilson, committees of the senate and house, and representatives of the state, war and navy departments, left Washington for Oyster Bay, N. Y., to attend the funeral.

TO HONOR FRANKLIN

U. S. TO CELEBRATE 21ST BIRTHDAY OF PHILOSOPHER.

Purpose of Observance is to Encourage Continuance of National Thrift.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Benjamin Franklin, whose picture adorns the 1919 issue of the War Savings certificates, will have on January 17—his 213th birthday—one of the most unique birthday celebrations ever undertaken, by honor of a distinguished American. It will have the full backing of the United States government.

The event will be celebrated through special exercises to be held in the public schools throughout the country and by various children's organizations. More than 150,000 War Savings certificates will make the day a special one.

In these and many other ways the nation will join in paying a gigantic tribute to Benjamin Franklin, whose words of wisdom on thrift and saving are familiar in every American home.

The purpose of this birthday celebration is to encourage the continuance of national thrift. Americans, power masters, become notable savers under war's pressure. Nationalizing this newly acquired habit is the task undertaken by the United States treasury.

While buying, save saving and sane investment are the watchwords of the 1919 thrift program.

Officials of the United States government point out the necessity for continued thrift. There are many tasks in Europe to be completed; the army of occupation must be maintained, and many hundreds of thousands of American soldiers are being returned to their homes. The treasury department has therefore launched a program of education of the American people in thrift and saving.

Rattle of Machine Guns Heard in Various Parts of City—Doctor Liebknecht Rallies Forces for the Final Battle.

Copenhagen, Jan. 7.—Berlin is in a state of complete anarchy and civil war has begun there, according to the Munich correspondent of the Politiken.

All the banks are barricaded and a great number of the public buildings are in the hands of the Spartan, or extreme radical group.

Thousands of armed workmen of the Spartan faction are crowding the streets and at several points firing has begun.

The sound of machine-gun fire could be heard from all parts of the city. The message reported the intention of the government to make an effort to storm the building of the police guards later in the day and take possession of all the machine guns and cannon there.

Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the Spartan leader, has been seen here and there about the city organizing his troops for the final fight, which is expected to begin very soon.

Hundreds of persons are reported fleeing from the city.

5 YEARS TO TEST RAIL PLAN

Director General McAdoo Urges Extension of Federal Control Through Peace Period.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Accomplishment of railroads under federal control in the last twelve months and arguments for a five-year extension of government operation to provide a fair test of unified direction were recited by Director General McAdoo, testifying before the senate interstate commerce committee, which took up consideration of control until 1924.

Mr. McAdoo estimated the government's loss in operating railroads this year at $138,000,000. This represents the difference between the amount guaranteed to the roads as rental and the sums expended to the government to railroad income. If the higher rates had been in effect the entire year he estimated the government would have made a surplus of $100,000,000 and in 1919, with existing wages, operating costs and traffic volume remaining substantially the same as in last year, the government should make a surplus of $100,000,000.

ROSY DREAM OF BALLET DANCER

Caress in Chicago Hotel Betrays Naval Officer Said to Be $25,000 Short.

TWO BLISSFUL WEEKS

Pooling as Wealthy Cotton Planter, Money Was Spent Freely for Tailor-Made Suits, Furs, Etc.—Kiss Was Undeveloped.

Chicago.—Lives there a chorus girl with soul so dead who never to herself bath said, as she boiled the eggs and coffee over the hall room gas jet:

"Well, it's my turn next for one of those millionaire husbands, with a liveried chauffeur and champagne suppers and everything."

And what boots it to repeat that this was the rosy dream of Miss Lucille O'Dea, ballet dancer, who, when our story of the nonplussed detective and the Arabian knight opens was on the Panjans thrice at Grand Rapids, Mich., exactly charmed as always by her manner, Mrs. O'Dea.

The Arabian knight with the magic purse was none other than Chief Warrant Officer James Aloysius Donohoe of the United States navy, and he is charged with having embezzled $25,000 pay roll funds. But—for two perfect weeks Lucille achieved her dream.

A Tempestuous Wooer.

As R. E. Buxley, son of the third richest cotton planter in Louisiana, by god, said, Mr. Donohoe splurged into the O'Dea ken at Grand Rapids. And what between wine dined and motor trips Mr. Buxley proved a most tempestuous, ardent wooer.

They came to Chicago, where they registered at the La Salle hotel, Lucille and Mammie O'Dea having a suite in which were no gas jets, but electric chandeliers, Louis XIV furniture, Ming vases and Persian rugs, and all that. And, of course, there was the $200 tailor-made suit, the $500 fur and the $200 spending money.

Donse Detective J. Abrams of the La Salle was making his rounds on the sixth floor the other evening when he suddenly encountered in the front parlor what at first he thought was a new statutory group of Cupid and Psyche.

Their lips clung in a kiss. Mr. Abrams, a detective of chivalrous impulses, waited a considerable interval and looked closer.

"No," he soliloquized, "this guy isn't Cupid. Cupid never wore no pin."

Living Up to It.

"None but the brave deserve the fair."

"Well, I haven't heard of any girl refusing a second lieutenant."

A Necessary Step.

Policeman—"They are a couple of golfers who got into a scrap over a stroke, your honor."

The average American is open-minded.

American business is conducted by true Americans of vision, open-minded men who believe in their country and strive to meet their country's needs. The men in the business are no exception.

The business of Swift & Company has grown as the nation has progressed. Its men have been conducting the business efficiently, and economically, reducing the margin between the cost of live stock and the selling price of dressed meat, until today the profit is only a fraction of a cent a pound—too small to have any noticeable effect on prices.

The packing industry is a big, vital industry—one of the most important in the country. Do you understand it?

Swift & Company presents facts in the advertisements that appear in this paper. They are addressed to every open-minded person in the country.

CHANGES IN STORE AFFAIRS

Numerous changes in the affairs of Johnson & Hill Co. took place right after New Year's. Mr. George W. Hill sold his holdings in the store to Mr. Johnson and Mr. F. Witter, and Charles F. Kruger sold his interests to Ray F. Johnson. Both Mr. Hill and Mr. Kruger have wanted to get out of the store business for some time and it was with reluctance that Messrs. Hill, Witter and Johnson finally decided to buy their holdings. Mr. Hill has already severed his connections with the company and will probably engage in the "dreaded" business with the Road Construction Co. of Grand Rapids.

Mr. Kruger's health has not been the best for the past year and it was this that caused him to want to get out of the store and into something less confining. There is a great deal of friendly feeling between the retiring members and those who will continue the business. Mr. Kruger is still connected with the company and will be until sometime after February 1st.

Ray F. Johnson, the oldest son of the late Nels Johnson, the founder of the company, will act as general manager of the company and his brother, William F. Johnson, will act as assistant manager. The company is located at the corner of Grand and Second Avenues, and is the largest store in the city. In 1876 Nels Johnson in partnership with Henry Langard, started a store at the corner of Grand and Second Avenues. A year later Mr. Langard sold out his interest to Mr. W. H. Edwards who sold out his interest to Jere D. Witter. The new firm name being N. Johnson & Co. In about 1882 the partnership was changed to Johnson & Hill Co. In 1902 both Mr. Witter and Mr. Johnson died and Mr. Hill was made president. C. F. Kruger, son, and Mrs. N. Johnson entered the partnership of the firm in 1900 in the grocery department. His faithfulness and merit brought him many promotions and in 1936 he was taken as a partner and manager of the Grocery Department, which position he has held ever since and in 1914 he was appointed Store Superintendent.

The Johnson & Hill Co. will continue to do business, following the same policies and principles that has made its success and growth possible. Under the changed management it will strive for harmonious cooperation with patrons and employees and will strive at all times to give the best merchandise values and service possible. Some new features for the benefit of its numerous customers will be announced soon.

Johnson & Hill Co. as in the past, will try to live up to its reputation as The Store That Saves You Money.

JOHNSON & HILL CO.

This shoe sale starting last Saturday has been such a huge success that we continue same throughout the week. So many have responded to this wonderful opportunity of securing real worth while shoes at a saving in price that comes just at a time of year when people need just such shoes to tide them over till new shoes come in. Men come and look over these shoes at $4.35 or its kind well worth. We will surprise you. PUBLIC SCHOOL NOTES

The report cards for the second period were given out to the parents of the pupils of the public schools. These cards are sent out to give parents and others a teacher's estimate of a pupil's work. It is hoped that the cards will be looked over carefully and if shortcomings are below passing some steps taken to insure better preparation.

The basket ball team will play its first home game Friday night of this week with the Wauwatosa high school team. The boys are putting forth every effort to produce a winning combination this week.

Each pupil in the high school who is enrolled carries four subjects and recites four times daily. In addition, many pupils have laboratory and shop work. Some who are not classified as regular students or who have failed in some subject are given the opportunity to spend each day occupies forty-five minutes daily in recitation, and pupils are expected to spend from forty minutes to one hour in preparation for the recitation. It is not usually possible to do any of this studying at school or during school hours; hence from one to three hours of home study are needed daily. Parents, and persons who have pupils rooming with them, should see to it that the part of the evening is spent in preparing the daily assignments.

Not only is it necessary to attend to the study of lessons at home but it is also necessary that pupils come to school in the best of physical condition. In addition to the study of lessons, and all forms of social distraction through the week are usually to be avoided. School failures are as often due to these outside activities as to a lack of time put upon lessons.

Mr. C. F. Kruger entered the employment of the firm in 1900 in the grocery department. His faithfulness and merit brought him many promotions and in 1936 he was taken as a partner and manager of the Grocery Department, which position he has held ever since and in 1914 he was appointed Store Superintendent.

Our Big January Clearance Sale Is a Huge Success

Our store has been crowded with thrifty buyers since the sale opened last Saturday, who were quick to take advantage of the big price reductions. Many of the items of merchandise put on sale at exceptionally low prices cannot be bought by us at these prices today. Don't delay attending the sale in the near future. It will pay you big dividends. Come early in the morning if possible as the store is not so crowded then and our salespeople will be able to give you better attention. This great sale has so far surpassed our expectations that we have decided to add many new special priced items to the already large list that we published last week. Below is a list of the items put on sale on Friday of this week. These prices will last until this merchandise is sold.

Grocery Department

This store is here for the interest of its many customers. Here is a good motto to follow: Those who serve best, profit most.

If we can serve you to your entire satisfaction, we certainly will get your trade. We are in the same position as a servant or laborer if we don't do our duty towards you, you scratch us from your payroll and trade somewhere else. So we say it is for your interest that we must work, by looking up the right kind of merchandise at the right prices and right service. Our fortunate purchase stock is getting lower every day. Are YOU on a Side Track?

The person who gives little or no thought to his destination in life, is usually switched on the side track to make room for those fellows who know where they are going, and are on their way.

Also, if you go to the trouble of asking, you will find that a little saved money gave these ambitions and pushing fellows, a start in the right direction.

Are You Open-Minded?

The average American is open-minded.

American business is conducted by true Americans of vision, open-minded men who believe in their country and strive to meet their country's needs. The men in the packing industry are no exception to this rule.

The business of Swift & Company has grown as the nation has progressed. Its plants have been constructed efficiently, and economically, reducing the margin between the cost of live stock and the selling price of dressed meat, until today the profit is only a fraction of a cent a pound—too small to have any noticeable effect on prices.

The packing industry is a big, vital industry—one of the most important in the country. Do you understand it?

Swift & Company presents facts in the advertisements that appear in this paper. They are addressed to every open-minded person in the country.

The booklet of preceding chapters in this story of the packing industry, will be mailed on request to Swift & Company, Union Stock Yards - Chicago, Illinois

CHANGE IN STORE AFFAIRS

Numerous changes in the affairs of Johnson & Hill Co. took place right after New Year. Mr. George M. Hill sold his holdings to George W. Mead and Senator Isaac P. Witter, and Charles P. Kruger sold his interests to Ray P. Johnson. Mr. Hill and Mr. Kruger have wanted to get out of the store business for some time and it was with reluctance that Messrs. Mead, Witter and Johnson, finally decided to buy their holdings. Mr. Hill has already severed his connections with the company and will probably engage in the dredging business with the Root Construction Co. of Grand Rapids.

Mr. Kruger's health has not been the best for the past year and it was this that caused him to want to get out of the store and into something less confining. There is the best of friendly feeling between the retiring members and those who will continue the business. Mr. Kruger is still connected with the company and will be until sometime after February 1st.

Ray P. Johnson, the oldest son of the late Nels Johnson and co-founder of the Johnson & Hill Co., is now general manager of the company and his brother, Malcolm F. Johnson, recently returned from the Navy, is in charge of the U.S. Navy and is actively associated in the business.

In 1876 Nels Johnson in partnership with Henry Langard, started a store at the corner of Grand Ave. and First Ave. North. A year and Mr. Langard sold out his interests to Mr. W. H. Edwards who sold out his interests to Jere Witter, the new firm name being N. Johnson & Co. In about 1882 the firm was changed to Johnson & Hill Co. and business was purchased and the N. Johnson & Co. stock was consolidated with the Johnson & Hill Co. stock and the building at the corner of Grand and Second Aves. in the building now occupied by Jensen & Anderson. Mr. Hill had been associated with the firm as a partner, the firm name being changed to Johnson & Hill Co. In 1896 the partnership was changed to a corporation with the following officers: Nels Johnson, Pres., Jere Witter, Vice Pres., G. M. Hill, Secretary and C. F. Kruger, Treasurer. The firm name was changed to Johnson & Hill Co. in 1902. Both Mr. Witter and Mr. Johnson died and Mr. Hill was made president. Mr. Isaac P. Witter, Vice President, C. F. Kruger, Sec., and Mrs. N. Johnson entered the employ of the firm in 1900 in the Grocery Dept. His faithfulness and merit brought him many promotions and in 1909 he was made manager of the Grocery Dept. which position he has held ever since and in 1914 he was appointed Store Superintendent. The Johnson & Hill Co. will continue to do business, following the same policies and principles that has made its success and growth possible. Under the changed management it will strive for harmonious cooperation with patrons and employees and will strive at all times to give the best merchandise values and service possible. Some of the new features of its numerous customers will be announced soon.

Johnson & Hill Co. as in the past will try to live up to the motto as The Store That Saves You Money.
